Auberge Saint-Antoine

8 Saint-Antoine St., Quebec City, QC G1K 4C9

300 Years in the Making

Auberge Saint-Antoine encompasses a trio of sites in Quebec City's Old Port, on Îlot Hunt, an area facing the majestic St. Lawrence River. In its early days, the Îlot Hunt property was used as a wharf, then a cannon battery, and later by British merchants when Quebec City was one of North America's biggest and busiest ports. Each of the three buildings and structures still stand today as part of the Auberge Saint-Antoine story, and boast great historical significance.

With over 300 years of history to its name, the Price family is dedicated to preserving Auberge Saint-Antoine's history while providing a modern and luxurious 21st Century hotel experience.

During the construction of Auberge Saint-Antoine, a final large-scale archaeological dig was held that led to the discovery of several new artifacts, some of which date back to the 1600s. The objects discovered shed new light on a part of Quebec City's history. These precious items were documented and restored by the conservation center and are now on display throughout the hotel. You can find these artifacts featured in the common areas and guest rooms as a tribute to more than three centuries of Quebec history.

1st stop:

Pub l'oncle Antoine

29 Saint-Pierre St., Quebec City

You are invited to a local beer tasting in the ancestor of the Quebec City Pubs located in the marvelous vaults of the Barbel house. A hidden gem nestled in the heart of the Petit-Champlain neighbourhood, this pub is a little piece of history. You can eat and enjoy one of their various micro-breweries products, a nice whisky from their excellent selection or drink good wines, in a perfect atmosphere for relaxation.

2nd stop:

Montmorency Park National Historic Site of Canada

Côte de la Montagne St., Quebec City

Our professional photographer will be waiting for you to capture memories in this magnificent setting with your coworkers or individually. Park Montmorency National Historic Site of Canada is located in the historic core of the City of Québec, at the top of Côte de la Montagne. It is an urban park that forms part of the Fortifications of Québec National Historic Site of Canada. Large cannons lining the wall speak to the site's historical military role as a defensive battery. Bounded by a defensive wall, the site comprises mature trees, manicured grass, walkways, commemorative monuments and park benches all overlooking Place Royale and beyond to the St. Lawrence River.

Montmorency Park was designated a National Historic Site of Canada in 1966. It is recognized because for more than a century, the site was the location of a number of buildings of parliament, starting with that of the Legislative Assembly of Lower Canada, from 1792 to 1838; it is one of the sites where the Parliament of the Province of Canada met between 1841 and 1866 and the place where the Quebec Conference of 1864 was held during which were drafted the 72 resolutions, upon which the British North America Act is based; the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Quebec sat at that location between 1867 and 1883.

3rd stop:

Funicular ride

16 du Petit-Champlain St., Quebec City

You will have the chance to climb in the Quebec funicular, the only funicular of its kind in America. Built by William Griffith, the first funicular went into operation on November 17, 1879. The cabins scaled up and down the escarpment by means of a counterweight water process and steam power, major renovations were undertaken in 1978 and glass cabins offered a panoramic view of the St-Lawrence River.

It is in 1998 that the funicular was entirely revamped with modern technology. In 2004, the funicular celebrated 125 years of services. A book was published and the event was commemorated with a statue.

4th stop:

Dufferin Terrace

Des Carrières St., Quebec City

Again, our professional photographer will be present to capture memories in this beautiful environment with your coworkers or individually. The Dufferin Terrace, a long wooden sidewalk located next to the Château Frontenac, affords a stunning view of the St. Lawrence River and surrounding area.

Thousands of tourists flock to this terrace named in honour of Governor General

Dufferin. Long reserved for private use, this magnificent site has proven popular with residents and tourists alike since its public inauguration in 1838.

With its breathtaking view of the Château Frontenac, as well as of the St. Lawrence River and surrounding area, the Dufferin Terrace is the perfect spot to take beautiful pictures.
